

The Colonnade

The Official Student Newspaper of Georgia College

Inside

• • •

News

Student hit standing on curb

Page 2

• • •

Entertainment

18th annual Nutcracker ballet

Page 7

• • •

Sports

Men's basketball
goes to 4 - 2

Page 11

• • •

Public Safety

Where is Jack Sparrow when you need him?

Page 5

• • •

Feature

'tis the season

Page 6

Monks make Mandala

LEXI SCOTT / STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER
Tibetan Buddhist monks spend five days building a mandala, only to dismantle and distribute to both local waters and to audience members of the closing ceremony

KELSEY RICHARDSON
@GCSUNADE

The sounds of quick scraping against metal echoed through Allen's Market Building, engulfing the room with a collective sense of calmness.

A group of Tibetan Buddhist monks worked from Dec. 1 to Dec. 5 Monday through Friday to create a mandala sand painting.

Geshe Thupten Loden, one of the monks working on the mandala, said that the monks must undergo two or more years of training in order to be permitted to construct a mandala. Each mandala created is always unique.

Warner Belanger, assistant professor of religion and interdisciplinary studies, said that the monks go on a retreat for 20 days before they start on a mandala. They have four sessions of meditation that last around two hours each per day. During these meditations the monks practice visualizing what their mandalas will look like.

The monks use strings, rulers and protractors to draw out grids in chalk before they start adding in the colored sand. Once the mandala is mapped out, the monks start from the center of the table and gradually move outwards.

However, when they are creating the mandala, they work harmoniously making sure that no section of the sand is left incomplete before moving outward in the circle. This way the mandala remains balanced throughout its creation process.

"The fact that it is sand, and it's such a detailed piece, that amazes me," said Matthew Swords, senior environmental science major.

The mandala that was created in Allen's Market Building is a two-dimensional representation of three-dimensional space. The image in the sand displays a palace, where the Buddhist deity Chenrezig is in the center and is surrounded by lotus petals, each containing a different Buddhist deity that represent the different aspects of awakening.

Mandala page 3

There's an app for that

GC Athletics offers rewards system for fans' attendance

KELSEY RICHARDSON
@GCSUNADE

With the touch of a button, anyone who attends a GC sports game can earn points and cash them in for prizes.

To those who were unaware of this, the system is called Bobcat Fan Rewards.

Al Weston, sports information director, initially presented the idea to Steve Barsby, assistant athletic director and Wendell Staton, athletic director.

"What I wanted to do was turn those casual fans into repeat fans," Weston said. "The reward element would hopefully do that."

People can earn points through attending GC games and purchasing items at the concession stand. For most games five points are rewarded. However, on special occasions extra points will be given to game attendees. In the past, points have been awarded to people who wore pink during games that promoted breast cancer awareness.

The points are regulated through the bobcat rewards app. The free app can be found in the iTunes App Store and Google Play.

The app displays its individual user's overall points earned and the amount of games he or she has attended. The app also provides a list of upcoming games and potential prizes. Additionally, the amount of points awarded for each game is included.

It has a location based check in, so when someone with the app gets inside a certain radius of the Centennial Center during a game, all a person has to do is press a button and the points are added instantly.

Weston said that most of the prizes are items that are also available for purchase. Depending on the amount of points earned, a fan can cash in for a small prize, like a bobcats license plate for 50 points, or for the super fans, a bobcats tailgate tent for 1,000 points.

"I'm trying to save up for a Thunder bobble head," said Jk Mundy, a senior mass communication major.

The student has become the master

Students take on directing roles

JK MUNDY
@GCSUNADE

Those who've seen Georgia College theatre productions in the past know that the student body can act. But on December 4 and 5 some of these theatre students will be stepping backstage and directing.

Fourteen young directors are presenting their scenes at 8 p.m. at the Black Box Theatre.

The performance is free, and open to the public, but be sure to get there early. Directing Scenes has been known to pack it out, and space in Black Box is limited.

The student directors chose famous scenes from dramas, comedies and musicals written by notable playwrights and, with the use of student actors, portray the scenes to the Black Box theatre audience.

What makes the event such a draw is the variety of scenes the audiences gets to see. One minute smiles are stapled across the faces of the audience and then in the next scene their swallowing a lump in their throat.

The Directing Scenes plays range from "The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee" to "Killer Joe" to "Goldilocks and the Three Bears." Only in the Directing Scenes can individuals see this sort of variability. The scenes will be split between the two days of performances - seven on Thursday and seven on Friday.

On Thursday night Trey Rutherford, a sophomore marketing major, will be showcasing his acting talents in a scene from "The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee."

"I enjoyed the idea of working with people who are learning the directing process. It makes it a much more collaborative effort," Rutherford said.

Senior Mass Communication major Drew Allen is set to present his scene "Good People" by David Lindsay-Abaire on Friday.

"David Lindsay-Abaire is one of my favorite playwrights," Allen said. "Good People" has wonderful characters that are very real and capture your attention with how remarkably unremarkable they are."

This is Allen's directorial debut. Since his Freshmen year in 2011, Allen has acted in the Directing Scenes.

"The directing process has been very enjoyable for me," Allen said. "It was a joy to watch the scene evolve, I love how different my scene has become since its start to show night."

Harlee Pope, a freshman theatre major, is playing the role of a 56-year-old women in "Good People."

"Rehearsals usually last about an hour and they are very extensive. Drew Allen has us run the scenes in many different ways to see a new view of it," Pope said. "The scene takes place in a cold alley, so sometimes we go to an alley and perform there to get the feel of the environment, it's great."

JOHN DILLON / SENIOR PHOTOGRAPHER

Top: Clayton Roper's viewpoint of the intersection where he was hit. Above: Clayton Roper returns to the exact spot he was standing when he was hit.

Student hit standing on curb

Visually impaired student struck by speeding driver

JOHN DILLON
@JOHNDILLONIV

On Nov. 16, senior mass communication major Clayton Roper was struck by a car while standing on the curb at the intersection of South Clarke Street and West Greene Street. He recalls the incident.

"I was walking back from the Yokel Local. I was doing an assignment for one of my classes. I was interviewing people there," said Roper, who is visually impaired. "I was heading back to my room in Napier. I was getting ready to cross the street. The crossing on the corner of Clarke and Green, and I had stopped right at the crosswalk. I hadn't stepped out and all of a sudden I hear this screech and I look over and a car is about five feet away from hitting me, and then it hit me."

According to a report from the Milledgeville Police Department, the driver of the vehicle was attempting to turn left onto West Green Street when she lost control of her vehicle and ran onto the curb where she struck Roper.

"After I got hit, I got up and ran away because I didn't know if the person lost control or they just went insane," said Roper. "To me, it looked like they just hit me. I didn't know if something went wrong with their car or what. Plus, I landed in the middle of the road. I just got hit by one car and I didn't want to get hit by another, so I immediately got up and ran to the sidewalk and sat down."

Fire department and EMS arrived at the scene and took Roper to Oconee Regional Medical Center. Roper was shaken, but relatively unharmed.

"Nothing was broken. They took x-rays. I got a huge gash on my foot. It's going to leave a huge scar on my ankle. I'm also seeing the chiropractor for my knees," he said.

Roper says that he travels more cautiously now since the incident, but also that he still has to walk through the intersection each day.

"I'm a lot more cautious when it comes to cars that are very close by. I look at things as a matter of inches, because cars and people walk and drive up and down the street everyday and they miss each other by inches," he said. "We live like that very day. It is a glorious coincidence that this doesn't happen more often. I have to walk by [the intersection] everyday. Everyday, multiple times a day. I cannot not walk past it. My job is through that intersection. My classes are through that intersection. I have to walk through it every day."

While Roper approaches the crosswalk differently now, he also thinks that both drivers and pedestrians could do things differently.

"[Driving] is taken for granted. The responsibility of getting behind the wheel is taken for granted for most people because it something almost everyone does," said Roper.

"I think that it's not taken as seriously as it should, but I also think being a pedestrian is taken for granted that just because you're a pedestrian and you have the right-of-way that they repel everything. I've seen people just wander into streets that have a green light and they assume that nothing will come speeding around corner and hit them."

ELLIE SMITH / SENIOR PHOTOGRAPHER

Cold, hard truth about Free Speech Zone

The Free Speech Zone serves as a place for open protest as part of the First Amendment

NICK STRICKLAND
@GCSUNADE

The Free Speech Zone on front campus bustles with patriotic symbolism: an American flag soars overhead each day and a triumphant flame adorns the stout Olympic column. Despite that, students are rarely seen in the zone flexing their patriotic rights.

The First Amendment declares that no law passed by Congress can limit our speech. Since then, the rule has mutated to accommodate the world's many situations. Today, it stands that laws may control the time, place and manner in which the public can broadcast beliefs; however, authorities do not have the power to censor the content of speech.

Many Georgia College students take offense in the mere existence of the zone. "The fact that a free speech zone has to exist contradicts every value America was founded on," said Kenneth Brady.

Brady worries most for the generation growing up in an America with symbols that imply free speech is limited to certain areas. "These zones weren't a thing 15 years ago," said Brady.

Political science major Olivia Eason voiced an identical opinion.

"The fact that such zones exist is really an affront to speech," said Eason. "Any restriction on the voicing of thought, no matter how controversial, is extremely dangerous."

Many students expressed similar feelings, all criticizing some ambiguous authority figure for restricting their speech by establishing a free speech zone. Oddly enough, despite this "extreme danger," these volatile opinions, spoken beyond The Free Speech Zone, were not drowned out by the drone of helicopter blades and the stomp of riot police.

In fact, no GC students admitted to having their freedom of speech impeded in any way by campus authorities. In truth, it seems these students were empowered by the free speech zone: constantly glancing at its symbolism fondly while simultaneously criticizing its existence. Their apprehensions are not unwarranted, however. Free speech zones are frequently used to stifle the people's voice. At political campaigns, protesters are redirected to a cage labeled "Free Speech Zone." In these cages, dissenters can voice their opinion well away from the media's view.

What students overlook is that The Free Speech Zone is there for their protection, rather than their limitation.

Every year the campus ministry evangelists stop their nationwide tour in Milledgeville to admonish students on their way to class. Brother Jed and his disciples bludgeon passersby with accusations of sin coupled with perverse translations of Bible verses. Sister Cindy, who proudly refers to herself as "The Tampon Lady," swings a staff of sullied tampons in the telling of her testimony. Students, Atheists and Christians alike, stop every year to witness the evangelists' methods.

Luckily for Georgia College students, Brother Jed and his colleagues are not permitted to erupt their fire and brimstone by the fountain, where their rantings would be heard all through the library. Nor are they allowed to preach by Maxwell Student Union, where they would be potentially steering customers away from nearby businesses.

With the existence of the free speech zone, our university reserves the right, rather than to stifle these fanatics, to simply relocate them to a minimally disruptive space. And the university can do so without making headlines as an anti-free speech university.

In light of Brother Jed's tyranny over past years, students find themselves more thankful for the Free Speech Zone. "I'm glad religious zealots aren't allowed to follow me around campus telling me that I'm a whore for daring to be female and at a university," said Carol Ann Parrot.

Georgia College encourages free speech anywhere on campus, but the university also protects its students' freedom to hear whatever they want and to go to class undisturbed. So if you have an opinion share it, but if you want to make a spectacle of yourself, take it to The Free Speech Zone.

December 5, 2014

THE COLONNADE

3

PHOTO COURTESY OF ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE CLUB

Recycling bins separate various recyclable items from regular trash.

Waste audit calls students to bring about a change

Environmental science club gets down, dirty for cause

KELSEY RICHARDSON
@GCSUNADE

A group of Georgia College students emptied bags upon bags of waste onto front campus. No, these students aren't litter fiends. They are recycling advocates.

On Nov. 20 senior environmental science majors Trevor Alexander, Wesley Randall, Matthew Swords and junior biology Seth Whitehouse conducted a waste audit in order to collect data regarding GC's recycling rate.

They took garbage bags from designated non-recyclable and recyclable bins found in at various on-campus locations.

Any student passing by the waste audit was encouraged to participate, and many did. Those helping with the event dumped out the bags of trash, sorted the recyclables from the non-recyclables, and collected percentages and weights of the arranged trash.

The group who initially started the waste audit found that 20 percent of the waste collected from the recycling bins was non-recyclable. Despite the recyclable materials being slightly contaminated, recycling center workers can still sift through the trash, but not all people who manage waste are aware of this.

Senior environmental science major, Matthew Swords, shadowed a Milledgeville waste management official during his morning route.

Swords said that they would go to a designated recycling bin and open it. If the bin had a single black bag, it was considered trash. If a clear (recyclable) bag had a hole in it, it was trash. If the clear bag had any sort of trash seen in it, you guessed it—trash.

The results of the waste audit concluded that GCSU has a recycling rate of one percent. Randall said that UGA's recycling rate is around 20 percent, whereas other institutions reach as high as 50 percent.

In a week's span, only five to six bags of recyclables are collected at GC; these bags are the total findings from every on-campus location.

"Somehow we need to find a way to institutionalize the solution," said Doug Oetter, associate professor of geography.

A couple of solutions were brought to light by the waste audit leaders. They said that the logical steps to take to solve GC's recycling problem include educating the students, GC faculty and custodial staff about the benefits of recycling and what is recyclable, and also through strategic placement of recycling bins.

They also presented the idea of pairing trash bins with recycle bins to make sorting waste more convenient and the option of recycling more obvious.

"We could sort of cultivate a social environment where recycling actually makes you happy and it's deemed as cool, and you want to do it," said Randall. "But right now it is not necessarily the case."

Buddhist monks spend five days building a mandala, only to dismantle and distribute into local waters and the audience of the closing ceremony.

LEXI SCOTT / STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Mandala

Continued from Frontpage

In each direction represented by the petals, a gate exists. These gates symbolize the joining of the boundless thoughts: loving kindness, compassion, sympathy and equanimity.

Belanger said that out of compassion these monks want to achieve awakening as quickly as possible; thus, they paint this temple that contains a deity in order to transform into an awakened being.

"It's kind of fake it like you make it," said Belanger. "You imagine yourself as something."

The monks are originally from India, but they also have an established monastery in Atlanta called Drepung Loseling Monastery, Inc.

Ruby Werts, a permanent volunteer at Allen's Market Building, said that the monks travel to different places creating mandalas for 12 to 18 months. So far they have made 27 mandalas this year.

When the mandala is finished, the monks will conduct a closing ceremony where they will sweep away the sand painting and deposit it into the Oconee River Greenway.

"It's an amazing reminder that nothing lasts," said James Callahan, senior psychology major. "It's one of the most beautiful things I've ever seen. It'll soon be a part of everything."

LEXI SCOTT / STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Distributing the mandala into water is traditionally a prayer seeking the blessing of world peace.

December 5, 2014

THE COLONNADE

4

Study Abroad

Add it to your wish list for Santa

Photo courtesy of GCSU Study Abroad

FOR MORE INFO:

EMAIL:

studyabroadinfo@gcsu.edu

CALL:

478-445-4789

VISIT:

Bone House

[ 141 S. Clarke St. ]

Christmas shopping on a college budget

Our guide to shopping for everyone on your list, keeping the purse strings tight

ERIN PATRICK
@GCSUNADE

It can be near impossible to buy yourself even the simplest necessities on a college budget, so you can forget about trying to buy holiday gifts for your mom, dad, roommate, suitemate etc., right? Wrong.

Meet your new best friends: crafting and thrifting.

When we think thrift store we think cheap and used, but the possibilities are endless. Whether craft savvy or craft challenged, with a little faith and creativity you can transform a cheap purchase into a worthy gift.

Walking into a thrift store can be overwhelming at first. There's too much to look at and most of it looks useless — don't be fooled.

We're here to show you that there's more to thrifting than searching for ugly Christmas sweaters (but be sure to pick one of those up, too).

First, head to the mug section and take your time looking — leave no stone unturned. A unique mug with your mom, dad or friend's favorite coffee grounds inside makes a perfect and unexpected gift. If you're not sure about coffee grounds, how about a gift card to his or her favorite coffee shop? Tie a ribbon around it and call it a day.

Next, check out the CD section. Find a cheap CD with an intact, clean CD case on it; most thrift stores have them for two or three dollars. Remove the CD booklet and use the case to make a personalized photo frame! If you happen to like the music on the disc that's a plus, too. A square photo fits perfect in the case, but if you want to use a rectangular one then adhere patterned card stock or fabric to the case to make a bordered frame that fits your photo. Pretty paper, fabric, stickers and ribbon all make great additions to your frame. You can even use acrylic paint to paint a name, quote or design on the plastic! It's the perfect affordable, personalized gift.

We're still not done. We told you the possibilities are endless.

Want to make jewelry but don't want to pay high prices for beads? Get thrifty! Check out the jewelry section. Necklaces can be as cheap as 50 cents some places! Sure, most — if not all — thrift store jewelry is severely unattractive. Keep an open mind. You're just using the beads anyway! Cut the necklace or bracelet thread and reuse the beads on your own piece of twine, elastic, leather — whatever medium you choose. Who knows, you may end up with some vintage beads and you'll definitely end up with one-of-a-kind piece of jewelry.

There's plenty to be said for thrifting this holiday season as long as you remember to add a dash of creativity. Walk into Salvation Army like you own the place, because you got this.

Your wallet will thank you and so will your friends and family. Get out there and redefine "college budget" this holiday season. We're rooting for you.

THE · SHORT · LIST

The top new stories from all over the world as collected, curated and composed by Katie Skogen

At least someone is keeping a cool head. Louis Head, stepdad of Michael Brown, the 18-year-old killed by police officer Darren Wilson, released a public apology for his actions in Ferguson the night officer Wilson was not indicted by the grand jury. He was reported as saying "burn this b**** down" along with other offensive remarks. Head said he was speaking out of anger and regrets his statements, "In the end, I've lived in this community for a long time. The last thing I truly wanted was to see it go up in flames. In spite of my frustration, it really hurt to see that." Take note America. (CNN)

Trouble down in Texas. Ethics in the U.S. court system get muddier and muddier. Scott Panetti, a schizophrenic Texan convicted of murder in 1992, was sentenced to the death penalty to be executed on Wednesday. However, the federal appeals court of New Orleans halted the execution. Panetti's lawyers said he was too delusional to be executed. (USA Today)

Too hot to handle. I know this may come as a shock, but the weather has been unseasonably hot this year. So hot, in fact, that it's tied for the hottest year on record. According to the UN Weather Agency, 2014 may pass 2010 as the hottest year in record history. On Wednesday the UNWA rejected their claim that global warming has halted. Don't hold your breath for a white Christmas this year. (Associated Press)

The knots are staying tied. A recent study by The New York Times showed that more marriages are occurring than ever before, and less are ending in divorces. New numbers show that only one-third of marriages are now ending in divorce, contrary to the previously believed 50 percent. Couples are also waiting longer to be married, and those with more education have the highest rate of staying together. Don't give up, there IS a point to staying in college. (TODAY Show)

Dying deadlines. President Barack Obama has delayed an executive action on immigration regarding the deportation of illegal immigrants. The original decision was set to take place in the summer, then was changed until after midterm elections and finally has been postponed indefinitely. Officials said the specifics of the decision are still being developed, therefore they cannot put in anything into action just yet. (Newsweek)

The grand jury strikes again. To add to the political unrest surrounding the Ferguson case, another white police officer was not indicted in a case involving the death of a black man. New York police officer Daniel Pantaleo was videotaped in the killing of Eric Garner. Eric's stepfather urged peace regarding the incident. (Associated Press)

PUBLIC SAFETY

DECEMBER 5, 2014 JAMES BEAMAN, EDITOR

WHERE'S JACK SPARROW WHEN YOU NEED HIM?

Nov. 11, 1:08 a.m. Officer Kennedy pulled over a Ford F-150 for failure to maintain lane. During the stop, Kennedy saw an open bottle of Kraken rum. However, neither occupants had been drinking. The driver was issued a citation for having an open container and the bottle was disposed of. No further action was taken.

YOU'RE BANNED... AND PROBABLY GROUNDED

Nov. 12, 11:05 p.m. Sgt. Smith and Officer Kennedy were sent to Russell Library by Student Security in reference to a suspicious person going behind the counter at Books and Brew. Kennedy and Smith made contact with four people at the Information Technology Lab. One of the group members was 13, and another had been banned from Georgia College property since March. The one who was previously banned from GC property was arrested, while the 13-year-old was banned from GC property and taken home to his mother.

SHE'S A BACK SEAT FIGHTER

Nov. 16, 1:45 a.m. Officer Kennedy pulled a vehicle over for going 70 mph in a 55 mph speed zone. The driver was cooperative and said they were speeding because the two passengers were drunk and arguing with each other. When Kennedy went back to his vehicle to run their information for warrants, one of the passengers began hitting the other. Kennedy arrested the aggressor and gave the driver a verbal warning.

HE'S AS DUMB AS A DOOR MAT

Nov. 20, 10:58 p.m. Sgt. Smith was told by Milledgeville Police Department Officer Boyer that he saw a GC Housing door mat on the front porch of a house on S. Wilkinson Street. Smith made contact with the resident who said he took it in the fall semester of 2013. Smith told the guy he would have to pay for the mat and sent the case to Student Judicial.

IF YOU DON'T LOOK A COP IN THE EYES, THEY CAN'T SEE YOU

Nov. 23, 12:31 a.m. Officer Johnson saw two girls walking and stumbling into each other on the sidewalk. One of them was throwing up as she stumbled along. Johnson walked up and spoke to them, but they avoided eye contact and kept walking. Johnson tried talking to them again and they said they were sorry and almost home. One of them had vomit in her hair and on her dress. Johnson tried to get them to take a breathalyzer, but they did not comply. They argued that there were more heinous crimes happening and that Johnson should solve them instead. Johnson arrested them and took them to MPD for processing.

SOMETIMES I SLEEP NAKED TOO

Nov. 23, 1:14 a.m. Officer McKinney was dispatched to Wells Hall because of an intoxicated girl. He went to the room and found the girl passed out on the floor with her underwear around her knees. McKinney had her roommates get her dressed and requested Emergency Medical Services. After a couple minutes she woke up and began throwing up. McKinney confirmed from multiple people including her boyfriend that nothing sexual had happened and that she had pulled her underwear down herself. One of her friends said she was going to go downtown, but she became too intoxicated. EMS arrived and took her to the Oconee Regional Medical Center for alcohol poisoning treatment. The case was sent to Student Judicial.

NICE RACK, BUT NO BIKE

Nov. 24, 10:19 p.m. Officer Kennedy was sent to the bike rack outside of Adams Hall in response to a stolen bike. Kennedy met with the owner who said he last saw it locked to the bike rack two weeks before. When he returned, the bike was missing. He described the bike as a red and grey 2014 TREK 820 valued at $500. The incident has been turned over to investigations.

THEFT BY DECEPTION SOUNDS COOLER THAN IT IS

Nov. 25, 11:40 p.m. Officer McWilliams was called to Main Campus by Sgt. Smith because a man was walking around campus asking for donations in support of the American Red Cross. However, they knew the man was not affiliated with the humanitarian organization. McWilliams and Smith made contact with the man and arrested him for theft by deception. He was taken to the Baldwin County Life Enrichment Center and given a trespass warning.

IT'S A PUBLIC UNIVERSITY. NOT A PUBLIC LIBRARY

Nov. 26, 10:38 p.m. Officer Chatman was sent to Russell Library in response to a person trespassing on campus. Chatman made contact with the guy and ran his identification. Dispatch then notified Chatman that the guy had been banned from campus since 2011, so he was arrested and taken to the Baldwin County jail.

*reports obtained from GC Public Safety

Christmas at the Mansion
12/1 - 12/23
Candlelight Tours
12/6, 12/13, 12/18 6-7pm

Complete Your Christmas Shopping
at the Museum Store
Home Accessories,
Personalized Gifts & More!

Tues - Sat: 10am - 4pm
Sunday: 12pm - 2pm

The Old Governor's Mansion
and Museum Store

120 South Clarke Street (enter on Greene St.) • Milledgeville, GA 31061
478.445.7467 • www.gcsu.edu/mansion

Feature

December 5, 2014 Taylor Hembree, Editor

I
I
SI
H
ES
E
A S
O
N

Students reflect on how they spend their holidays after the craziness of finals week

Have a Rockin' Holiday

- have a tacky sweater contest
- make gingerbread cocktails
- eat christmas cookies and drink hot chocolate
- do an ornament exchange or secret santa
- ride around and look at Christmas lights
- karaoke to Christmas songs

*photos courtesy of Huffingtonpost.com

CROSSWORD

Across

1 Nobleman
5 Moppet
8 Ship part
12 Flag color
13 Skin opening
14 Ice house
16 Napoleon, for one
18 Bank items
19 Congeal
20 Picnic crasher
21 Small rug
23 Assembled
24 Bad day for Caesar
26 Spin
28 Breakfast fare
32 Kind of layer
34 On the ball
35 ___ Cruces, N.M.
36 Balloon filler
39 Smell bad
40 Rifle attachment
42 Cat command
44 Actor Wallach
45 Ornamental carp
46 Galley slaves
47 Manicurist's concern
49 Root vegetable
50 Distort
53 Eye drop
55 Bauxite, e.g.
56 Ace
58 AARP members
59 Commercials
62 ___ cotta
64 Netherlands city
67 Mayhem
68 Stocking stuffers
69 Wine, in a Trattoria

Copyright ©2014 PuzzleJunction.com

70 ___ good example
71 Biddy
72 Doe's mate

Down
1 Declines
2 ___ vera
3 Litter member
4 Grassland
5 Rich cake
6 Crumb
7 Abound
8 Big name in hotels
9 Conceit
10 Andean animal
11 Haystacks painter
13 Bear cat
15 Bone (Prefix)
17 Do watercolors
22 Cropped up
25 Aria singer
27 Movie preview
28 Distant
29 Sheltered, at sea
30 Film unit
31 Being a pain in the neck
33 Electrocute
37 Computer symbol
38 Hindu princess
40 Downhill racer
41 USMC rank
43 Recipe amt.
46 Handbag
48 Relative of 10 Down
49 Relatives of 5 Down
50 Sweater eater
51 Bailiwick
52 Audacity
54 German industrial city
57 Word of honor
59 Mine entrance
60 Comic Carvey
61 Urban haze
63 Decompose
65 A Stooge
66 Campers, for short

Solutions from 11/21/14

BRITTNEY SCHWIND
@GCSUNADE

Crunchy leaves, bare trees, boots, scarves and a cool breeze indicate the coming winter season. As buildings finally become warmer and jackets roll into fashion, there is a certain magical feeling that encompasses this cheery time of year. Most holiday traditions for students do not involve staying on Milly's antique streets, but instead many people happily visit family, friends and celebrate their break with loved ones.

Traditions tend to accumulate around the holidays, some unique and quirky, but still popular among many. For instance, some people sprinkle corn over their yards to feed Santa's reindeer on Christmas Eve. On New Year's Eve, some bang pots and pans, some throw confetti and some ring in the new year by toasting with champagne.

Whether you're celebrating with your family or those crazy neighbors who are way too excited, the holidays still bring laughter and fond memories to all.

Some of the best memories are created when family gathers to celebrate. From family dinners and exchanging gifts to decorating the tree, Georgia College students celebrate the holidays in fun and unique ways.

"We hide a pickle ornament in our tree," said Rebecca Winslow, freshman Spanish major. "Whoever is the first to find it gets to open their presents first."

Kennedy Godwin, a freshman pre-nursing major, and her family have a tradition rooted in trivia.

"In order to open a present we have to answer a trivia question," she said. "If you don't get it right, you can't open a present."

Many memories are formed and created as families get together over the winter break. Professor Rebecca Miles, academic advisor for many students, remembers many Italian Christmas Eves with her dad's side of the family, with lots of laughter and stories around the dinner table.

Freshman Griffin Wilkens remissed about the time he was supposed to blow out the Menorah candles one Hanukkah season, but he stayed up late playing video games instead.

"The next morning we are all downstairs eating breakfast, and I walk by the Menorah, and I see that the candles' wax have almost encased the Menorah entirely, all of it melted," he said. "I swapped the Menorahs, so no one knew."

Along with receiving gifts from friends and family, some traditions involve more giving than receiving. Giving back to the community is a tradition that many families like to uphold. Shoes boxes get stuffed with toys for Operation Christmas Child, food kitchens bustle with volunteers helping to feed the needy, donations of unwrapped toys for Toys for Tots takes place at malls and donation boxes overflow with coats, blankets, cans and candy canes to spread good cheer.

As the season of giving dies down, another holiday comes to the forefront of everyone's mind. Involving lots of sparkles, partying, eating and sharing resolutions, New Year's Eve is a celebration bringing with it a 'new year, new me' attitude. As the ball drops on New Year's Eve, many traditions between loved ones emerge.

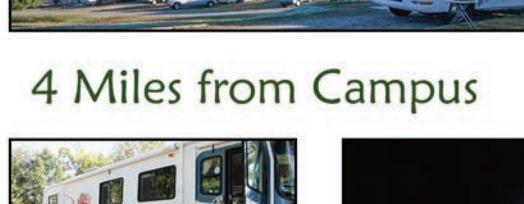

Nicolas Merino, freshman physics major, and his family look to inspire riches and travel with their New Year's Eve tradition.

"We stand up on chairs as the ball is dropping and the New Year is about to start. We have money in our pockets so it brings riches for the next year, and we hold luggage in our hands so we can travel a lot," he said.

It is these deep seeded traditions and memories that students hold onto and bring with them into the future. Some are derived from different cultural influences, and others are quirky family upbringings.

Either way, the winter season is a fun one. With any luck we'll have a little snow this break and make many more memories for future years.

Full Hook Up Large Sites

4 Miles from Campus

Free Internet and Cable

Pet Friendly with Pet Yard

6:30 PM Check Out mentioning this ad

Scenic Mountain R.V. Resort

2686 Irwinton Rd S. / Bus 441 S.
Milledgeville, GA 31061

478-454-1013

Toll Free 1-855-571-1013

Classifieds

Rentals

800-sqft apartment: 1 bedroom/1 bath; stove and refrigerator; ceiling fans in all rooms; washer/dryer hook-ups (can provide machines if necessary); manufactured wood flooring; pets allowed if agreed by landlord, (must get along with my 2 small dogs), deposit required; fenced, wooded yard; back porch overlooking wooded area. Can provide some furnishings. No loud parties. Non-smoker. $550.00 per month, including electric (based on usage), 1/2 water bill; and $550.00 deposit. Background and credit checks required.

Contact 478-414-8388.

The 18th Annual Nutcracker

SARAH
DICKENS
@GCSUNADE

The sound of holiday music swept through the halls of Miller Gym as ballet dancers leapt and twirled about its dance floors.

They were preparing for the Nutcracker Ballet, a dance feature that will be showcased at Russell Auditorium Dec. 12, 13 and 14.

Compared to last year's Nutcracker Ballet, there will be more of a variety of dance styles from around the world.

"There are tons of different styles, so it's not just ballet dance," said Jenna Allenson, junior middle grades education major. "We have Indian, which is more hip-hop, but modern type."

Allenson will play several roles in "The Nutcracker." Some of the roles include: a snowflake, a Chinese soloist, a candy-cane soloist and an Arabian.

There will be French maidens, Indian dancers and even dancing reindeer.

Allenson and the other cast members practiced their parts two days a week, including weekends. They have been rehearsing for their ballet performance since September.

"We put in a lot of work and hopefully that shows and that it doesn't look like it was too hard," Allenson said. "It wasn't easy, but it wasn't hard."

The work that the cast members put in will add diversity to the play, according to Allenson.

"I think we have a lot of new dances this year," Allenson said. "Every year, we have something new or something changed. I think it adds diversity and I think the audience will like the diversity."

The goal behind putting on "The Nutcracker" is simple: to put the audience in the holiday spirits.

"Hopefully, they'll leave appreciating the art and the effort we put into the play," Allenson said. "We hope that they will have enjoyed the experience and magic we put into it."

Allenson's favorite scene from the Nutcracker Ballet is a Magical Moment for her.

"I really like the dream scene where Clara goes to sleep, wakes up, and is with the prince and this kingdom of sweets (with) snow coming down," Allenson said. "I just think the snow coming down is so pretty and so elegant. We try to make (the dream aspect of this part) come alive."

To purchase tickets for The Nutcracker Ballet, visit www.gcsutickets.com.

Holiday movie premiers

If you need something to do over the break, check out these five movies that will soon be coming to a theater near you.

MICHELLE DUBIN
@MICHELLED246

Wild- Wednesday, Dec. 3

From the directors of "The Dallas Buyers Club," comes the powerful and emotional movie "Wild." Already getting Oscar buzz for best picture, Reese Witherspoon plays Cheryl Strayed who decides to walk more than a thousand miles of the Pacific Crest Trail alone, after the destruction of her marriage and the death of her mother. Based on the bestselling memoir by Cheryl Strayed, "Wild" captures the emotions, physicality and power of the journey Strayed took.

Annie- Friday, Dec. 19

"Annie" is getting an update in the year 2014. This modern day version of the film follows the same storyline as the 1924 strip Little Orphan Annie. Quvenzhané Wallis, who is an Academy Award Nominee, plays Annie in modern-day New York City. Left by her parents at a foster home, Annie lives every day under the evil authority of Miss Hannigan (Cameron Diaz). It isn't until she meets New York mayoral candidate Will Stacks (Jamie Foxx) that her hard knock life turns into a loving family.

Into The Woods- Thursday, Dec. 25

The popular musical "Into the Woods," which combines the stories of several Brothers Grimm Fairy Tales, is finally coming to theaters Christmas Day. The movie features an all star cast including Anna Kendrick (Cinderella), Lilla Crawford (Red Riding Hood), Daniel Huttlestone (Jack and the Beanstalk), Emily Blunt (Bakers wife), Johnny Depp (Wolf) and Meryl Streep (Witch). The film, which is still in a musical format, follows the classic tales of all the characters and is brought together by the wish the baker and his wife have to start their own family.

The Interview- Thursday, Dec. 25

From the people that brought you "This is the End" and "The Neighbors" comes the hilariously funny movie "The Interview." Dave Skylark (James Franco), host of "Skylark Tonight," and Aaron Rapoport (Seth Rogen), his producer, land an interview with North Korean leader Kim Jong-un after they discover he is a fan of their show. The CIA sees this interview as an opportunity to assassinate Kim Jong-un and recruit Skylark and Rapoport, who are the two most inexperienced men for the job.

Unbroken- Thursday, Dec. 25

Directed by Angelina Jolie, "Unbroken" is based on the best-selling nonfiction book by Laura Hillenbrand. The film follows the life of Louis Zamperini (Jack O'Connell), a famous Olympic runner who spends 47 days at sea after surviving a plane crash and more than two years as a prisoner of Japanese war camps during World War II. The film required the actors to diet for months and brave choppy waters in Moreton Bay.

SASS AND MILLY

ANDIE LEEDS
@ANDIELEEDS

In a world full of amazing wonders and mysteries, staying in one place is possibly the worst thing a person can do with their life – a part of growing up is exploring different places and discovering where you fit in.

Change is one of the most terrifying and exhilarating parts of life. It is something that we cannot avoid, for without change, our lives are stagnant and a stagnant life is not worth living. Recently, I made a decision to embrace change and see where it may take me.

This month, I am a bobcat; next month, I will be a bulldog. Deciding to transfer to UGA next semester was one of the hardest choices I've ever made.

When I first decided to attend Georgia College, I did so because my sister goes here and I wanted to be close to her. I was afraid of change and I flocked to what was familiar to me. My sister is one of my best friends and I feel so lucky to have her close by.

Since being here, I have made friends and joined organizations that have helped make this past year and a half absolutely incredible. I was skeptical to join The Colonnade at first because I usually hate when people read my writing and I want to go into film more than journalism. At first, I wrote articles to get extra credit for my Professional Media Writing class with Doug Monroe. That's where it all started...

On the very first day of class with Monroe we watched a video called, "What if money were no object," narrated by Alan Watts. The video spoke on making decisions based on what inspires you – it emphasized doing what you love instead of what would make you money.

After class I thought long and hard about that video and watched it about 10 more times that day. I realized that there was not one thing that I absolutely loved to do. I mean, I'm not completely square, I like to have fun and I find happiness in simple things, but I could honestly not come up with something that I would want to spend the rest of my life doing.

I decided to immerse myself in hobbies that I would not normally do, the first on my not-to-do list was become a journalist. When I first started publishing in The Colonnade, I refused to look at the paper -- I would submit my article to the editor and pretend like it was never run in the issue.

Over time, I fell in love with journalism, I found myself annotating the New York Times and cutting out articles to tape on my wall. What I love most about writing in a newspaper is getting to tell a story, getting to teach people about something that they would otherwise never know happened. From journalism, I discovered my passion for movie making and now I finally feel confident that through this, I will find happiness in my future work.

Unable to let go of journalism quite yet, I accepted an offer to join the editorial team of The Colonnade as Assistant Editor of Entertainment this semester. I was really nervous about my position because I had absolutely no idea what I was getting myself into. Within the first few meetings with my fellow Colonnards, we became a family.

I imagined the staff of a newspaper being made up of pretentious bitches, but my Colonnade family is just a gaggle of sass.

I made the decision to transfer to UGA because I am interested in their Mass Media Arts major and ultimately because I can't stay in one place for a long time. This past semester has been the best semester I've ever had and I have no doubt that it has a lot to do with the incredible people at this school.

I am so proud to have been a GC bobcat and a writer, assistant editor and columnist for the school paper. I love this small town and I will definitely be back to visit. For this last publication of SASS in the Milly, I want to thank Doug Monroe for completely confusing me about my life direction, The Colonnards for accepting me into their family and all of you bobcats for making these semesters so amazing.

5 things to do in Milly

1 Directing Scenes
Friday, Dec. 5 at 8 p.m. at Black Box Theatre
GC's Directing 1 class will be presenting their scenes, performed by fellow students. Admission is free.

2 Holiday Concert Extravaganza
Friday, Dec. 5 at 7:30 p.m. at Russell Auditorium
The Music Department presents a holiday compilation of several GC Choruses.

3 CAB Midnight Breakfast
Monday, Dec. 8 at 10:00 p.m. at The Max
Take a study break with CAB's traditional Midnight Breakfast. It's the highlight of finals week. Get there early to get one of the 250 free T-shirts.

4 Nutcracker Ballet
Dec. 12 and 13 at 7 p.m. and 14 at 2 p.m. at Russell Auditorium
After finals are over, enjoy GC's 18th annual Nutcracker Ballet. Dancers range from ages 3 to adult. Tickets can be bought at the door.

5 An A Cappella Christmas
Dec. 17 at 7:30 p.m. at First Presbyterian Church
This concert features GC's a cappella group, Max Noah Singers. If you're still in town, be sure to check it out.

Diversity Peer Educators 2015-2016

Diversity Peer Educators are a group of student leaders dedicated to facilitating conversations among the student body about various issues of diversity. The role of the Diversity Peer Educator will be to improve inclusivity within the Georgia College community through peer education and advocacy. This will include utilizing group facilitation, collaborating with Housing, and completion of semesterly requirements. Selection Process will include interview.

Position Requirements

- Full time student
- Minimum of 15 hour credits completed
- 2.5 GPA
- Good academic standing at time of hire
- Participate in DPE functions
- Must have a strong commitment to diversity and inclusion.
- Good verbal communication and presentation skills
- Demonstrate the ability to work in a team

*This is a paid position

Contact us at gcsu.dpe@gmail.com for more information!

THE COLONNADE

Volume 91, No. 10

CBX 2553 Milledgeville, GA 31061

MSU 128, office hours posted

Newsroom: 478-445-4511

ColonnadeLetters@gcsu.edu

ColonnadeNews@gcsu.edu

EDITORIAL

editor-in-chief Kelly Mainornews editor John Dillonasst. news editor Katie Skogencommunity news editor James Beamanentertainment editor Sam Blankenshipasst. entertainment editor Andie Leedsfeature editor Taylor Hembreesports editor Derek Robertsasst. sports editor Nick Landoncopy editor Abbey Brown

STAFF

photo editor Ellie Smithart director Rebecca Slackdesigner Michelle Hanleydesigner Marissa Dilisioadvertising manager Katlyn Robertsasst. advertising manager Kristen Cremeansdistribution manager Jeff Diceweb master Chris Gagefaculty adviser Kaylene Armstrong

The Colonnade is the official student newspaper of Georgia College. The Colonnade is an editorially free newspaper produced by students. Georgia College cannot influence editorial decisions of The Colonnade and editorial opinions are those of the editorial board and do not represent the official opinions of the university. The Colonnade is not responsible for any false advertising. We are not liable for any error in advertising to a greater extent than the cost of the space in which the item occurs. The Colonnade reserves the right to edit or reject any advertising copy submitted for publication. There is no guaranteed placement of ads. The Colonnade does not accept advertising concerning firearms nor guarantee ads concerning alcoholic beverages. All stories and photographs appearing in this issue and previous issues, unless otherwise noted, are copyrighted by The Colonnade.

No, sorry I can't read her mind

DAVID PAULSSON
@GCSUNADE

I'm a twin. You may be a twin too. But if you're not a twin, chances are that you have some questions about it. And chances are that your questions are ridiculous. So let me answer them before you have the chance to make me mad.

My twin sister's name is Elizabeth. She's 19 and was born on May 2, 1995 to Gene Paulsson and Cindy Cobb. Coincidentally, I'm 19 and was born on May 2, 1995 to Gene Paulsson and Cindy Cobb. Yes, that makes us twins.

Sometimes I'll know what Elizabeth's going to say before she says it. However, that's not because I can read her mind.

It's because I know her like I know how to add two plus two. And that's because we've grown up together. It's not some kind of mystical twin power. I wish those were real, but unfortunately, at least in my experience, they're not.

I can't (physically) feel her pain. I can't telepathically communicate with her. Sorry to disappoint you.

Also, if you ask me if my sister and I are identical, I'll probably respond with profanity, followed by a rant about the differences between the male and female reproductive organs.

Now that I've told you what isn't true about twins, I'll get to the good stuff: memories and experiences that explain why I love being a twin.

One good thing is that I always have a go-to answer if someone wants to know something interesting about me. You know that annoying icebreaker that all teachers use on the first day of class? All I have to say is that I'm a twin, and all of a sudden I'm mysterious and desirable.

My sister and I spent a lot of time together as kids. My parents worked, and the only person I could hang out with was my sister. Sadly, she had the dominant personality and we usually ended up doing whatever she wanted to do.

Which may or may not have included playing with stuffed animals and making them talk.

Yes, I just got real with you.

No, I'm not ashamed.

Those were some good times. As we grew up, our personalities changed. We didn't always get along.

Okay, we barely got along.

But we made it through the fights and arguments and crying and yelling.

We made it through middle school. Barely.

We made it through having four classes together our junior year of high school.

Yes, I said four.

And finally, we've made it through a year of attending separate colleges, Elizabeth at the University of Georgia and me here at Georgia College.

The thing about twins is that it's just like most sibling relationships. The only difference is that everything is intensified. The competition, the arguments, the laughter, the bond.

So even though she's mean and irritating and frustrating and thinks life is a Disney movie, she's still my favorite person in the world.

THE LITTER Box

I'd like to congratulate the Bobcats on another undefeated football season.

SOS. No money for Christmas shopping...

How come SERVE doesn't always serve, if ya catch my drift?

Text your message to
(708) 949-NADE / 6233

Leave your message at
Twitter.com/GCSUnade
Like us on Facebook and send us a message

Happy Holidays from our family to yours!

Love,
The Colonnade

THECOLONNADE

@GCSUNADE

THECOLONNADE

Cross country aims for next season

Men's and women's cross country teams fail to reach the Naitonals

NICK LANDON
@REALNICKLANDON

The Georgia College men's cross country team battled it out in the NCAA Southeast Regional Championship, but fell short of their initial goals taking tenth overall in the race.

Assistant Coach Steven Cary says he's proud of the team's effort and showing despite some setbacks.

"I thought that both teams performed well considering the circumstances," said Coach Steven Cary. "We battled some minor injuries down the stretch, a little bit of inexperience and the race day conditions were warmer than usual this time of year."

Junior runner Paul McNeil finished his season with a top 25 finish in a field of 165 competitors. McNeil recorded a time of 33:45, making him the 23rd fastest on the day.

Other junior cross country runners James Ryden and Michael Warrick contributed to the men's team's success with 42nd and 64th place finishes respectively.

Cary was pleased to see the men's team start to build a solid foundation in the NCAA Regional Tournament.

"All-in-all it was a positive team effort by our men and women, and I was glad to see our men crack the top 10 for the second straight season," Cary said.

The women's team's performance was a little less impressive than that of the men's team, but it wasn't without some positive notes to end the season on.

While the team placed 15th overall, junior Rachel Pasko led the women's team, finishing 63rd overall.

Pasko has lead the team in every race this season, and it doesn't look like she'll slow down anytime soon. Pasko also broke the Georgia College women's record in the Peach Belt Conference Championship 6K race with a time of 22:37.

Though the rest of the women's team's performance was underwhelming, that doesn't mean they won't get stronger in the future.

"We knew early on that this was going to be a rebuilding year for our women's team," Cary said. "Despite our youth, the ladies competed well all season and showed that they have the potential to be a conference contender in the coming years."

Cary has high hopes for the men's team as well.

"We really thought we had a chance to be one of the top teams in the conference this season," the assistant coach said. "Pending whether we can stay healthy and focused, I'd say we have a great shot at finishing well in the conference and region meets in 2015."

Nick Landon

FSU: overrated and unworthy

We'll find out this weekend if Florida State will remain undefeated on the year, and we'll find out in about three weeks if Jameis Winston will remain undefeated in the court system.

Conference championship weekend is upon us, and that means the standings are almost set in stone for the first ever College Football Playoff. Undefeated Florida State is currently fourth in the nation, falling from third place. This has some people upset.

In short, my gripe here is that Florida State University doesn't deserve to be in the top four -- and not just because I hate Jameis Winston.

Florida State wins games, sure. "At the end of the day we still find a way to win games," Seminoles senior offensive tackle Cameron Erving said. "It's amazing the resiliency of this team."

Florida State doesn't find a way to win, they just keep playing OK football and wait for the other team to lose. I call it getting "Winstoned."

Lets travel down a timeline of Florida State's "perfect season."

The defending national champs kicked off their season with an impressive six-point win over the 5-6 Oklahoma State Cowboys. This was followed by an excusable 23-17 win over Clemson, then a three-score win over NC State, who led the 'Noles 24-7 in the first quarter. Bang! Winstoned! But that's really as impressive as Florida State's season gets.

Notre Dame would have doomed the Seminoles to a decent bowl game instead of a playoff berth if not for an offensive pass interference call that erased a go-ahead touchdown. Zing! Winstoned!

The Seminoles also nearly fell to Miami, only squeezing by with a 30-26 win. Miami led the 'Noles at the half 23-10. Pow! Winstoned!

Florida State managed to squeak by again in a 20-17 win with a last-second field goal against the exceedingly "decent" Boston College Eagles. Whamo! Winstoned!

The week after the nailbiter against Boston College, the regular season grand finale came down to a narrow 24-19 win over the 6-5 Florida Gators. Combo Breaker! Winstoned!

Florida State is a fine team, but they're not the fourth best in the country for sliding by decent teams all year.

Baylor has played better football, and deserves the number four spot more -- despite one loss on their otherwise very nice resume.

Ohio State University has reason enough to be in the mix as well. I'll take anyone but Florida State.

The problem is, if history repeats itself, Georgia Tech will take a commanding lead in the first half. I'm guessing the Jackets will lead FSU by three scores closing out the second quarter. Then, Georgia Tech will play comically bad football for the next hour and a half and then boom! Winstoned!

ELLIE SMITH / SENIOR PHOTOGRAPHER
Larice Walker's, Shanteona Keys' offense carries GC to win.

GC Women's basketball wins three straight

main factors of the GC win. The Bobcats turned the ball over 12 times compared to Tuskegee's 19. GC went on to score 31 points off of turnovers.

Georgia College vs. Stillman

The Bobcat squad carried their momentum from last Friday's game into their next game as they beat Stillman 71-65 last Saturday, thanks largely in part to the play of Donley.

Donley paved the way offensively, leading all scorers with 24 points. She shot better than 50 percent from the field, and went 10-14 from the free throw line.

Walker continued her impressive play and recorded team-highs with five assists and four steals. She also contributed with seven rebounds.

The Bobcat bench found success for the second straight game. Senior forward Belinda Schaafsma lead all bench players with an impressive 19 points in limited minutes. She also brought in a team-leading nine rebounds.

In a rare occurrence Keys didn't start, but still found a way to contribute 12 points from the bench.

"The bench has given us a terrific spark of energy," Smith said.

The turnover ratio once again fell in favor of the Bobcats. They turned the ball over seven times, while Stillman committed 12.

Additionally, GC outrebounded Stillman 46-37.

Georgia College vs. West Georgia

In a back and forth game that saw nine lead changes, the Bobcats outlasted the Wolves by a score of 64-62 Tuesday night.

at the Centennial Center in the Bobcats' home opener.

The nail-biting matchup made for an exciting, yet stressful game, as GC fans got their first chance to see the lady Bobcats in action.

This marked the third consecutive win for the streaking Bobcats, and the team's chemistry is continuing to improve.

Donley led the Bobcats in scoring for the second-straight game with 15 points, and just like last Saturday's game, she made seven of her 13 field goal attempts.

As previously mentioned, the play of GC bench players has undoubtedly helped the Bobcats pull out wins. The GC bench was back at it again Tuesday night as they combined to score 28 points.

Sophomore guard Lindsey Reed recorded 14 points, enough to lead all bench players.

Additionally, Reed's defense is also receiving praise. Smith said he's been using Reed to guard the opposing teams' best players.

"She's giving us tremendous energy, and I'm proud of the way she's playing," Smith said.

The Bobcats physical presence down low also played a large role Tuesday night. GC scored 28 points in the paint, while holding West Georgia to 20.

In addition, the big players in the paint have held their own rebounding, as they've outrebounded their opponents in two of the three wins.

"Our defense getting rebounds is what we hang our hat on, and we have do that night in and night out," Smith said.

Up next, the GC squad will travel to take on Fort Valley State at 6 p.m. on Saturday. The Bobcats are looking to notch their fourth win in as many tries.

ON DECK CIRCLE

MEN'S BASKETBALL
GC vs. Fort Valley State
Saturday, Dec. 6 @ 8 p.m.

Football matchups to get you through finals

DEREK ROBERTS
@ATLSPORTSDEREK

With finals approaching, there are a multitude of great sports matchups to watch over the next few days.

This weekend's games include several highly anticipated college football conference championships, that will determine the college football playoffs. With four weeks remaining in the regular season, the NFL games will also be action-packed this weekend. There are several matchups between teams fighting for playoff berth.

Pac-12 Championship: No. 2 Oregon vs. No. 7 Arizona

9 p.m. Friday on FOX

The Oregon Ducks can lock in one of the four spots in the playoffs with a win. Arizona could also advance to the playoffs if they win and Florida State and/or Baylor loses. Arizona has won the past two games against Oregon.

SEC Championship: No. 1 Alabama vs. No. 15 Missouri

4 p.m. Saturday on CBS

The top seed in the playoffs is Alabama's for the taking with a win against the under-matched Missouri squad. Alabama looks to remain undefeated. Missouri advanced to the SEC Championship last week after Arkansas and Georgia lost. In their last matchup Alabama destroyed Missouri 42-10 in 2012, Missouri's first year in the SEC.

Big 12 Championship: No. 6 Baylor vs. No. 9 Kansas State

7:45 p.m. Saturday on ESPN

Baylor beat KSU 54-24 two weeks ago with little resistance, and if they can duplicate their success they will advance to the playoffs. KSU can advance with a win and losses from at least two of the top four teams. KSU is fighting for their second Big 12 title in three years.

ACC Championship: No. 4 Florida State vs. No. 11 Georgia Tech

8 p.m. Saturday on ABC

Despite the fact that Florida State has won the majority of their games against worthy opponents by a slim margin, they are still unbeaten. After barely beatign Florida last week, Florida State can secure a position in the playoffs if they beat a run-heavy Georgia Tech team. Georgia Tech is coming off of one of their biggest wins of the season, as they beat higher ranked Georgia in overtime last week in Athens.

(7-5) Steelers @ (8-3-1) Bengals

1 p.m. Sunday on CBS

The Steelers are currently in the hunt in the AFC for the playoffs. The Bengals currently lead their division, and if the Steelers win they would be a half game back in the AFC North. If the Bengals win they will have a game and a half lead with an easy remaining schedule.

(7-5) Chiefs @ (9-3) Cardinals

4:05 p.m. Sunday on CBS

The Cardinals currently lead the NFC West division, and are still without their starting quarterback Carson Palmer and star receiver Larry Fitzgerald. The Chiefs are in the hunt for the AFC Wildcard.

(8-4) Seahawks @ (9-3) Eagles

4:25 p.m. Sunday on FOX

The Seahawks are one game behind the Cardinals for the NFC West, and could gain ground with a win and a Cardinal loss. The Eagles will look to stay on top of the NFC East division.

(5-7) Falcons @ (9-3) Packers

8:30 p.m. Monday on ESPN

The Falcons have a losing record, but are leading the NFC South. A win will secure their spot even if the Saints win. The Packers lead the NFC North and a win will also secure their spot.

GCHOOPS HEAT UP

#12

#12: McMILLIAN

50% FIELD GOAL PERCENTAGE

#25: BLUMENTHAL

9.2 POINTS PER GAME

#5: THOMAS

10.7 REBOUNDS PER GAME

#20: ANDERSON

52.6% 3-POINT PERCENTAGE

#14: MWANZE

13 BLOCKS, 11 OFF. REBOUNDS

#14

#25

#5

#20

MARY GRIFFIN & NICK LANDON
@GCSUNADE

Georgia College vs. Fort Valley State

With the Clark Atlanta loss in the back of their minds, the Georgia College men's basketball team used the defeat as motivation going into their next game at home against Fort Valley State.

The Bobcats bounced back and went on to dominate Fort Valley 86-41. They led 42-22, almost double the score of Fort Valley's going into halftime, and didn't let up.

Georgia College was in total control of the court both offensively and defensively throughout the entire game.

Senior guard Larentis Thomas and junior forward Rio McMillian lead the team with 15 and 13 rebounds respectively.

"Defensively, we were there," Thomas said. "Offensively, we smothered them."

Thomas, the sole senior on the team, said he prefers to "lead by example," however he doesn't enjoy being under the spotlight.

Teamwork is vital to a successful program, and that is one of the main challenges the team is facing this season. The Bobcats have nine new players and only five returning from last season.

"The biggest challenge is team chemistry, [just] trying to mesh everyone's personality," Thomas said.

Head coach Mark Gainous said the matchup against Fort Valley was an all-around team victory.

"With the non-conference games, we are more concerned with getting better," Gainous said. "It's a learning process; we're still a very young team."

Gainous is hopeful about the rest of the season, as their record stands at 4-2. He said the two losses were "heartbreakers." Losing both games courtesy of back-to-back buzzer beaters to Albany State and Clark Atlanta, the team could easily be 6-0.

The two losses did not discourage the Bobcats, but rather highlighted what needed to be improved upon. It takes time for a new team to work together, but so far the Bobcats seem to be moving in the right direction.

Impressive stats show that the team is, in fact, improving.

"For the entire NCAA, we are eighth in the country in defensive field goal percentage," said Gainous. "If you play defense, you always at least have a chance to win."

Thomas is also using the losses to improve.

"If we lose, we have to find a way to motivate ourselves to get another W," Thomas said.

Georgia College vs. Albany State

The Bobcats kept the winning spirit going, as they beat Albany State 77-64 on Tuesday at the Centennial Center.

GC picked up their second-straight win, and are now 1-1 in the tough Peach Belt Conference.

Junior guard Dwight Howard led the team in scoring with 21 points. Thomas also contributed with 18. Thomas also recorded a team-high 15 rebounds.

The Bobcats outrebounded Albany state 50-41. Additionally, GC scored 22 points off of turnovers and 24 second chance points.

McMillian pitched in with 11 points off of the bench, and junior guards Alex Reid and Juwan Howard both chipped in with eight points.

Junior, starting shooting guard, Terrell Harris, expressed some goals that the team made for themselves.

"For individual games, some goals are to shoot over 45 percent from the field, [or] holding down teams to under 60 points," Harris said. "Long-term, our goal is to win the Peach Belt."

As the season progresses and the team continues to learn how to work with each other, the results are a reflection, as they've won their past two games.

"I hope the students and community continues to come out and support us," Gainous said. "It makes such an impact on the games."

Up next, the Bobcats will hit the road and play at Fort Valley State at 8 p.m. on Saturday. The Bobcats will then travel to South Carolina to play Anderson at 4 p.m. on Dec. 13.

GC will play their next eight games on the road.

The next home game won't be until January 10, but GC can still show support by following the basketball team on twitter at @G_C_hoops.

Season's Greetings

*May your holiday season
be filled with joy.*

Your friends at University Housing